Whether an accomplished painter, or complete novice, many individuals benefitted from Ian's advice and encouragement.

Ian was a great believer in just picking up the brush and learning through experience, there was no wrong way to paint. He did not claim to have the perfect technique or all of the answers you sought but that did not stop him providing a helpful hand, and often a helpful ear.

Please feel free to comment here any words of wisdom Ian shared with you along the way; in due course I will collate the comments and list them in an article of their own.
